

THE CORONATION OF KING CHARLES II.

In 1661, King Charles II was crowned at Westminster Abbey in London. The coronation was a grand affair, attended by thousands of people from all over the country. The streets were decorated with flowers and banners, and the city was alive with music and dancing. On the day of the coronation, the king wore a magnificent robe made of velvet and ermine, and a crown set with precious stones. He processed through the streets in a golden carriage, accompanied by his nobles and courtiers.

At the ceremony, the Archbishop of Canterbury placed the crown on the king's head, and the people cheered and waved their hats in the air. Afterwards, the king went to a special banquet, where he ate and drank with his guests.

The coronation of King Charles II was an important event in English history, marking the return of the monarchy after years of turmoil and civil war.

Retrieval Questions:

1. Who was crowned at Westminster Abbey in 1661?
2. What was the city like on the day of the coronation?
3. What did the king wear at the ceremony?
4. Who placed the crown on the king's head?

Inference Questions:

1. Why do you think the coronation was attended by thousands of people?
2. How might the king have felt during the procession and ceremony?
3. What do you think the return of the monarchy meant for England at that time?